

DEATH AND INJURY

along all right. Dilline, motorman on the local, will be laid up for some time with the fractured leg. He is at his home on South Church street. Driscoll, his conductor, is almost completely recovered from the shock and his sore spots are disappearing.

George Underwood's worst injury is an injured knee and it will be some little time before he will be able to use it.

Fred Myers, a young man from Toledo, lay on a cot in the hotel lobby and continuously asked that he be not bothered but that the others be looked after. His legs both lay limp as if broken and his face covered with gashes. He was later taken to Toledo at his request and conveyed to the Toledo hospital where information today states that the extent of his injuries can not yet be determined by the physicians.

George E. Crawford, of Findlay, with one eye nearly gouged out of his head and with other deep cuts and a leg on which he could scarcely step, urged that everything be done for the rest as he was not hurt. He was later removed to Senator Beatty's house and today his injuries appear to be very serious.

Another and one of the worst injured, S. A. Dugan, with the calf of his leg nearly torn off and his face almost unrecognizable from cuts, joked and told funny stories to the long faced visitors who came into the room to see him.

A Boston traveling man who was but slightly hurt, had the pleasing sensation of being hugged and kissed for dear life by another man's wife, a bride of but a few hours, it is understood. The bride was hysterical and it is presumed she thought the stranger was her husband. It was some little time before her arms could be unfastened from his neck. Several other women shrieked and were hysterical and for a short time wild excitement prevailed. A small fire in one of the cars promised to add further horrors to the affair as had it gained headway some would have been burned to death before they could be removed. The blaze was quickly extinguished.

Oscar Straight, conductor of limited, was injured internally, face and arms badly cut. George Main, the motorman, face and body badly cut. Wm. Driscoll, conductor of local, bruised and cut. W. F. Dilline, motorman of local, leg broken in two places, face and body cut.

Coroner Jones will hold an inquest and a thorough investigation into the causes that resulted in such a terrible accident.

The general conduct of railroads is for them to suppress everything in connection with accidents, but in this case no hesitancy is expressed by the company in giving out information and a committee consisting of superintendents of other electric lines has already been appointed to make a full investigation of the affair and make a report.

There is no doubt but that the accident was due to disobedience of orders or a mistake of some one in the employ of the company. Both crews insist that they had the right of way, the limited crew declaring that they had orders to pass the local at the Portage switch, while the crew on the local had orders to go into the "Y" at the car barns to permit the limited to pass.

Superintendent Wm. Smith did heroic work in caring for the injured.
